Student 1: Emma

Emma feels connected to her fellow psychology students and enjoys attending seminars. She studies consistently, keeps up with readings, and rarely misses deadlines. She also works part-time in a café.
Continued

Student 2: Lucas

Lucas has made several friends at university and feels that he belongs in the programme. However, he procrastinates frequently, rarely prepares for seminars, and often studies only immediately before exams. He reports considerable stress.
Continued

Student 3: Noor

Noor finds it difficult to connect with classmates and often feels like an outsider. Nevertheless, she follows a strict study schedule, completes assignments early, and consistently attends lectures. She has little interest in student parties.
Continued

Student 4: Thomas

Thomas feels disconnected from the university community and has not developed friendships within his programme. He also struggles to organize his studies, frequently misses deadlines, and rarely prepares for exams. He is highly motivated to become a psychologist.
Dropped out

Student 1: Sophie

Sophie feels comfortable among her classmates and has developed a reliable study routine. She rarely experiences academic stress and spends much of her free time volunteering.
Continued

Student 2: David

David has several close friends in his programme but frequently procrastinates. Despite his inconsistent study habits, he feels relaxed about university and rarely worries about his academic performance.
Continued

Student 3: Julia

Julia feels isolated from her classmates and struggles to plan her studies. She frequently experiences anxiety about exams and worries that she will disappoint her parents.
Dropped out

Student 4: Max

Max has not made friends at university and finds it difficult to keep up with coursework. He often misses deadlines and experiences intense academic stress, despite being interested in psychology.
Dropped out

Student 1: Anna

Anna has made close friends at university and feels comfortable participating in class. She studies regularly and completes assignments on time. She is sometimes anxious about exams.
Continued

Student 2: Benjamin

Benjamin rarely feels connected to his classmates, but he is highly organized. He follows a weekly study schedule, attends lectures, and prepares carefully for examinations.
Continued

Student 3: Clara

Clara feels socially isolated and struggles with time management. She often procrastinates, misses deadlines, and finds it difficult to maintain a study routine. She has a part-time job.
Dropped out

Student 4: Daniel

Daniel has not developed friendships in his programme and often feels that he does not belong. He also studies irregularly and frequently falls behind on coursework, although he enjoys the subject.
Dropped out

Student 1: Eva

Eva has a strong sense of belonging at university and studies consistently. She does not have a part-time job and participates in several student associations.
Continued

Student 2: Finn

Finn feels socially isolated but maintains an effective study routine. He does not work alongside his studies and spends most evenings reading or exercising.
Continued

Student 3: Grace

Grace feels disconnected from university life and has difficulty organizing her studies. She works three evenings per week in a restaurant and often misses assignment deadlines.
Dropped out

Student 4: Hugo

Hugo has not made friends in his programme and rarely prepares for lectures. He works weekends in a supermarket and frequently falls behind on coursework.
Dropped out